

DFCC Aloka Initiates Islandwide Medical Camps for Women in Partnership with DOC 990

Posted on

DFCC Bank furthered its partnership with Doc990 with a series of medical camps for women. Through the partnership with Doc990, DFCC Aloka offers a range of digital health solutions that can be accessed conveniently from the comfort of home, 24/7. DFCC Aloka accountholders, along with up to three family members, can enjoy seamless access to video consultations with qualified Doctors, order and get the medicine delivered to their doorstep, mobile lab facility and many other healthcare offers, including hospital channelling and booking fee discounts. Shera Hassen, Vice President of Branch Banking Planning and Implementation, said, “This is a huge milestone for DFCC Aloka, and we take this opportunity to thank DOC 990 Doc990 for being our partner whilst also acknowledging the invaluable contribution of the Kanola Hospital to our Aloka Medical Camp. At DFCC, we believe in empowering women to realize their dreams and goals, and a key requirement to do that is good health and wellbeing, which is why we have commenced this initiative, which will be an ongoing program.”

Janith Peiris, COO of Doc990, stated, “In response to the increasing demand for innovative and convenient healthcare solutions, Doc990 is both honoured and excited to collaborate with DFCC Aloka, a trailblazer in financial and lifestyle services. Together, we are dedicated to providing women in Sri Lanka with continuous, user-friendly access to digital health services. Doc990 is thrilled to empower women through cutting-edge digital healthcare technology, giving them the confidence and convenience to manage any health-related situation effectively.”

DFCC Bank is ranked among Business Today’s Top 40 Corporates in Sri Lanka.