Posted on

DFCC Bank now accepts digital signatures placed via LankaSign, becoming one of the first banks in Sri Lanka to offer this service.

The need for secure and trusted digital signatures has become crucial as the world moves towards an increasingly digital future. DFCC Bank recognises this need and has partnered with LankaSign to offer its customers a more convenient and digitally secure way to interact with their Bank.

Accordingly, DFCC Bank customers who register with LankaSign can now easily forward all formal requests and transactions to DFCC Bank electronically and use their digital signatures to authenticate and verify these. This innovative value addition simplifies banking processes, reduces reliance on paper, and enhances security by ensuring the authenticity and integrity of electronic transactions. With digital signatures, customers can be confident that their transactions and accounts are protected from unauthorised access and alterations.

Thimal Perera, CEO of DFCC Bank, expressed his enthusiasm about this significant step forward: “At DFCC Bank, we have always aimed to lead the way in sustainability and digital innovation. Accepting digital signatures via LankaSign provides our customers with a more seamless and secure banking experience. This initiative also aligns perfectly with our commitment to environmental wellbeing, as it reduces the need for paper-based transactions and promotes a greener banking experience.”

“At DFCC Bank, we’re banking on shaping a sustainable and digitally empowered future, where convenience meets security, and diverse products and services blend with seamless access,” added Asanga Uduwela, COO at DFCC Bank, “We believe that exceptional experiences and sustainable finance are two sides of the same coin, and achieving one, means achieving the other, simultaneously. With this new feature, we look forward to igniting a new era of seamless digital banking.”
