

Regina Margherita At Urban Kitchen

Posted on

Bringing the exquisite taste of authentic Italian cuisine to Sri Lankan urbanites, Regina Margherita recently launched a wood-fired pizza corner at the Urban Kitchen at Arpico Super Centre in Hyde Park Corner, Colombo 2. This joint venture, while maintaining the same quality and standards that Regina Margherita in Colombo 5 is famous for, will target a different sector of customers.

Not only does it plan to serve families but also several business venues and office executives who can, at rush hours take away their favourite pizza deal. Delivery services will be available in the very near future as well.

“With this new location, we celebrate a joint venture between Urban Kitchen and Regina

Margherita. As we serve our exceptional food, we aim to create a “neighbourhood” venue, inspired by the “Italian table” where people relax, share, and enjoy each other’s company, and Urban Kitchen is ideally one of them; housed at an affordable and accessible spot,” says Director, Handapana Hotels, and inspiration behind Regina Margherita, Barbara Avossa Gamage.

She added that, unlike the typical ‘junk food’ pizza that is commonly available, guests at Regina Margherita will be treated to the real Italian pizza, with food created by renowned Italian chefs in the traditional Italian wood-fired pizza making method. The meats used here will be 100% Halal, in keeping with the regulations at Urban Kitchen, and the cuisine is also free of MSG.

From delicious meaty options such as Prosciutto E Funghi (Tomato, mozzarella, chicken ham and mushrooms) and Pollo India (Tomato, mozzarella and tandoori chicken) to vegetarian delights such as Marinara (Tomato, garlic and oregano) and Capricciosa Vegetariana (Tomato, mozzarella cheese and mixed vegetables), the extensive menu at Regina Margherita, Urban Kitchen, will entice customers with both excellent taste and affordability in a cosy atmosphere.
